Acalculator is a small, lightweight, and fast calculator for Windows that uses the Aero Style Theme. It handles all arithmetic operations, including functions, calculations, conversions, and pasting of results. With the first season of the MLB regular season about to start, we already know a number of performers whose star power could very well have them leading the league in terms of home runs, batting average, and other statistical categories. One of the most obvious candidates is Aaron Judge, who is coming off a monster rookie campaign in which he batted a respectable .253/.326/.491 and set an MLB rookie record with 52 home runs. This season, despite a soft July, Judge is looking like the real deal. He hit .315/.367/.592 in just 99 games, but the big surprise is the uptick in his power numbers. Judge hit .300 with a career-high 22 home runs in the final 59 games of last season, but the Red Sox bench-warming first baseman is already at .320 with 13 long balls in his first 39 games of 2018. As a result, Judge is now tied for the National League lead with 32 home runs, and he's one home run behind Mike Trout. The Cubs' Anthony Rizzo leads the majors with 36 home runs, so Judge is in excellent position to take over the top spot by midseason. Judge doesn't have much competition for the NL home run leader, as Milwaukee Brewers first baseman Jesus Aguilar is leading the Majors in home runs and Rizzo is leading in RBI. MLB.com's Steve Adams seems confident that Judge will be able to overcome the slump that slowed him in 2017. "I think Aaron Judge will heat back up. This year he just started off slow and maybe still got a little down after that [elbow] injury last year and missed a month. It's just kind of the cycle, and he's been really good this year," Adams said in a chat with MLB.com. "But I think he's going to be fine. He's got the rest of the season. "There's a lot of evidence to suggest the power is still there," Adams said. "He was a pretty good power guy when he was younger, so we'll have to see how he bounces back, but I believe he will. ♦

AeroCalculator is a simple, yet very useful Calculator that will perform all the basic operations on two numbers you provide. The Calculator comes with an intuitive user interface that you can use with a mouse or a keyboard. AeroCalculator is a free application that does not require any installation. Please note that you are not able to save your calculations or copy and paste them elsewhere. AeroCalculator Windows 7 Requirements: Minimum Hardware Specifications: -1 GHz or faster processor, 256 MB of RAM or more -3D display (Vista or Windows 7) -512 MB free hard drive space, 1 GB free on Windows 7 Information and Broadcasting Minister's (I&B) Digital Locker will provide easy access to the latest full episodes, and OTT movies, of various channels and various genre. On 6 August, the National Broadcasting Commission (NBC) in collaboration with Internet services provider, Banglalink, launched the Digital Locker. In an exclusive interview, Digital Locker head Engineer A.K M.Salman said, "We will provide 1 million subscribers-worth of content, and so far, the quality of the content is very high. The entire content will be free, and downloaded through an Android application." The Digital Locker can be accessed by using the MyNBC app, and is available in English and Bangla language. NBC's flagship channels like Radio, Television, Dance and Music Channel and Hit FM are available through the Digital Locker. Besides, it will also provide access to international channels such as Star World and Gyaan TV. The entire content is free, and users can access the content using different platforms such as computers, smartphones and tablets. However, the content can be downloaded only through the Android application. Accessing the content will not require registration, but users will be required to put in their email id, which will be used to send all the latest updates. The service will offer 30-day trial for free, but after that, users will be charged on a monthly basis, and will be charged at the rate of Tk 500 per month (about $12.50). I have been using a lot of Windows 7 programs, and I recently decided to transition to the new 15.37 MB FreeBeeWallpaper App. Actually there is a better utility, but it requires a much bigger number of free MB! This is the FreeBeeWallpaper App: This
