Nigerian Air Force jet crashes, amid violence in northern town A Nigerian Air Force (NAF) Antonov AS-32 airplane crashed at 8.10 am on Saturday at Dedeagba, an airport in Kaduna, Nigeria. The crash happened after a loud noise was heard. The aircraft took off from Kaduna and was due to land in Katsina, the capital of the state of Katsina in the north of Nigeria. Three crew members died in the crash, while another eight passengers died at the scene. Three passengers were wounded. Reports say that the pilot of the aircraft managed to eject and parachuted to safety. The air force confirmed the incident in a statement saying that the accident has "placed all our lives at risk". The cause of the accident is not yet known. The accident has sparked a high level emergency meeting in the city of Kaduna, the capital of Kaduna state. The governor of the state has ordered a shutdown of all public offices and suspended the state's parliament. The injured were taken to several hospitals in the city. At least 13 ambulances were deployed at the scene. Victims are being treated at Benisheik Social and Hospitals before being transferred to other hospitals. Six corpses have been discovered in the crash site, reported by NAN. NAF spokesman Godwin Zim said that the aircraft took off from the Kaduna International Airport. "When we got to the scene, the aircraft is on fire. There was a loud noise and people shouted 'the plane has crashed,' so we went immediately. We didn't know there were people on board," said Zim. There are four options of the cause of the crash, according to Zim: He blamed the NAF for not providing enough information about the accident. "I am not in a position to talk about the details of the accident. All I know is that we have lost lives. We don't know how many people were on board the plane," he said. Tianne M'wama, the chairman of Kaduna chapter of the Nigerian Air Force Association, said that the airline, which is a Nigerian company, was very reliable. "Our aircrafts are
